THE First Number of the New Series of the OVERLAND SUMMARY OF THE BOMBAY GAZETTE is a considerable improvement on anything we have yet seen turned out in a similar shape. It contains 32 pages, and is replete with interesting information on Indian subjects of all kinds. At the price, four annas, the Summary is ridiculously cheap. Sixty-nine columns of closely printed reading matter all for a mere sixpence! The fact is almost beyond belief by reason of its very marvellousness. In addition to a well-arranged and judiciously-selected mass of intelligence there is a series of articles on the topics of the times, reproduced from the daily editions of the Bombay Gazette. On the whole, or taking it all in all, the Overland Summary, published at the Bombay Gazette Press, is about the best, if it is not the best, we have seen and people desirous of keeping their friends in the mother-country well-informed of all that is transpiring in this far-off land would be guilty of an unpardonable piece of omission if they neglected forwarding by each Mail copies of the really excellent publication we have been noticing.—Sindian.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 23, 1872.

WHILE the Bengal, and even the Benighted Presidences have their own Commissariat Codes, the Bombay Commissariat must acknowledge the much to be regretted fact that it has hitherto been unable to get so useful and necessary a compilation for the Department. The sister presidencies are so far ahead of us in this respect, that they not only have their own separate Codes, but issue periodically additions to the same, thus bringing the rules of the Department from time to time up to date, in a form which can always be available as a guide to the Commissariat officer, who having such a manual in hand is saved the labour and loss of time which references to the numerous and frequently vague and contradictory orders in his office would involve. The want of a Commissariat Code was very forcibly felt during the late Abyssinian Expedition. The Madras and Calcutta Commissariat officers brought their handy books of reference, while Bombay had to take, instead, cart-loads of circulars, orders and resolutions! Practically the latter, though taken, were perfectly useless, since there was neither the time nor the opportunity, nor even the possibility, of wading through these unwieldy records of the inefficiency of our Commissariat in the matter of a Code. It was found during that expedition that each Presidency had a different way of doing certain business and a different mode of rendering certain accounts. Profiting, therefore, by the experience of the past, we would suggest that the modes of carrying out the duties and the rules ought to be as far as practicable the same in every presidency. The greater the uniformity and simplicity of a system attained, the more facility there would undoubtedly be in the despatch of business, especially on occasions when the armies of different presidencies take the field together.

THERE is an interesting, able, and eloquently written article by Mr. A. C. Lyall, in the last number of the Fortnightly Review on the Religions Situation in India. Whether or not one may agree with its conclusions, it is at least worth reading, and its views are worthy of being taken into consideration. What makes the subject of India so distasteful to home readers and, for the matter of that, to readers anywhere, is the difficulty of finding anything like general views which lead to important conclusions. The mind is lost among the multiplicity of phenomena and is irritated by trivial details which refuse to be arranged under any general principle, and which can be brought up so as to stultify any general views which any one not very minutely acquainted with India is likely to form. It is refreshing to come across a writer on India like Mr. Lyall who possesses so great a power of fixing his attention only on dynamical facts and handling them in a masterly way, and it can hardly be denied by any intelligent person that the subject of which he treats is one of the highest importance even when considered from a practical and political point of view.

Mr. Lyall draws an interesting parallel towards putting down the infamous traffic which co-operation had been generally promised, added that the only question then pending was whether the expense should not be borne in part by the Indian Government. Of course it, is perfectly clear that the Indian taxpayer should furnish the wherewithal to stamp out the slave trade in Africa. Are they to obtain an Act to recognise the obligation? Are not the African slaves black, and are not the natives of India, if not black, at all events, of a dusky hue? Moreover, the Government have full and irresponsible control over the Indian revenues: they can spend them as they please, and when they are all spent, can lay on fresh taxes to get more. Who is there to check them? Therefore it is reasonable and convenient that the Indian revenues should pay England a share of the expense of extinguishing the African slave trade. Quod erat demonstrandum.

MILITARY LETTER.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

LONDON, 2ND AUGUST.

A DISTINGUISHED officer predicted that our autumn manœuvres will make foreign nations come here to learn the art of war, and the fact that the 7th Dragoon Guards are to be dismounted for the time, their horses being required for the staff-officers, visitors from abroad, and others, points clearly to an invasion in force of the foreign military element. While agreeing with the Field Marshal Commanding-in-Chief and the able lecturer in Scotland Yard that "nothing is so unlike a real battle as a sham one"—in the nursery we were taught that a cat looking out of a window is most like a cat looking in—no one can doubt that these peaceful operations are admirably adapted to test some of the most indispensable qualities of an army. Our best officers are now agreed that neither his nor the soldiers' education can be completed within the walls of a barrack, in the Long Valley, or in the Phœnix. Our men can march, on parade they are the steadiest and at the same time the smartest in the world, and can skirmish as required by the drill-book. But they require to be taught much more than this. My visits to Wimbledon and the battle-fields of France tell me that great modifications are necessary in our drill and tactics. The conditions of actual warfare are greatly changed by the introduction of long range artillery and arms of precision. Our boasted "thin red line" must give place to what is called the "swarm" formation, and one must be taught how to fight on uneven ground, how to seize on every piece of cover, and to make the most of special positions and localities, how to receive cavalry when skirmishing in line, and how to act as dispersed troops. The shikar grounds of India and the Cape honourably testify to the self-determination, pluck, and coolness of our officers, and point them out as men who, as captains, are worthy of more importance and independence than is accorded to commanders of companies. To the material the British army is now composed of, any advance in the art of war calling for increased intellect or phisique, must be an advantage, for it can so readily adapt itself to it. It must be remembered that the Prussians commenced the campaign against France with a system of infantry attack which they had speedily to alter, the remarkable skill of their officers and the intelligence and obedience of their men enabling them to do so even in the very middle of the campaign. Captain Brackenbury and others who have had experience of recent warfare say, "that painful as it may be, we must meet the fact that open advances in line, and open resistance by men standing boldly upright in line, are now as impossible to the English as to any other nation, and so surely as men go into action in line, so surely will they have to break their ranks or remain useless." Let them therefore learn this autumn how to break their ranks and fight in the "swarm" formation, and let our military authorities, by seeing troops attack over all sorts of ground, come to a right conclusion how this swarming can best be organised. Our cavalry, too, need much teaching before they can come up to the usefulness of the German Uhlan. History tells us how that impetuosity has always been their bane, how they hunted the Frenchmen down the slopes of Waterloo and returned on beaten horses to be sabred at every step. Many of us still remember how "into the valley of death rode the six hundred" and how our heavy brigade drove the Russian masses from the field. Now brilliant charges are no longer the chief vocation of this arm. I am writing of European warfare, for in India headlong rush of cavalry upon the foe will always tell its cutting pointed tale. Here its functions are those of "the eyes and ears" of the army, to secure it against surprise, to cover its operations before and after the battle, to reconnoitre, to gain information, and to spread false and deceptive news over the enemy's country. These are duties demanding in no limited degree courage, skill, energy, ability to stand hardship and fatigue, and implicit self-reliance. It is notorious that during last year's manœuvres officers commanding cavalry regiments showed themselves and their men in positions where they drew upon themselves an instant and destructive fire of big guns and rifles; and that for want of information Generals often manœuvred in utter ignorance of what was in their front. Let the sham campaign of 1872 alter all this and teach our mounted service a useful lesson.

In a few weeks the chalky downs of Salisbury plain will be gay with all the pomp and circumstance of war. The head-quarter staff, under the Commander in-Chief, will be established at the town itself. It will consist mainly of officers on the staff at Pall Mall, and be supplemented by a few additional recruits, amongst whom will be found Majors Baker, 18th Royal Irish, and Brackenbury, R.A., Lieutenant-Colonel Barker, 64th Regiment, Captains Gascoine, Scot's Fusilier Guards, and Marindin, R.E. There will be an umpire-staff for each of the two army corps. The head quarters of the Control Department will be under Controller Maturin, C.B., assisted by Assistant Controllers Irvine, Hozier, and Stuart. As armies are estimated in these days, the forces engaged will be but small, but from the number engaged we shall be able to collect such information as will enable us to work on a still more extended scale. The troops to be assembled are twelve regiments of cavalry, fourteen batteries of artillery, and twenty-four battalions of infantry. These troops will take the field under the assumption that an enemy having effected a landing has lodged a small force in Dorsetshire with a view of averting our attention from his movements, his main body being engaged in another part of the island. To meet this advance a reserve of regulars, maintained at Aldershot for such an emergency, is moved forward to Salisbury Plain. The enemy halts at Blanford Racecourse, where he gets into the open country, gathering up his columns from the roads behind him. On the other hand the invaders halt at or near Marlborough to receive their reinforcements hurried down from the north. This done, they move across the plain in order of battle to meet the enemy advancing from Blandford, intending to await them in the strongest position they may be able to find.

In the interim the force at Aldershot is busy practising, and I hear excellent accounts of the outpost duty performed by the 12th Hussars: Colonel Maclean has brought out a system for himself and has taught both officers and men how to practise it. This regiment has lately arrived at the camp from York, and from the peculiar smartness of the men and the excellent stamp of its horses, is a most creditable addition to the Aldershot force. On Monday the whole force moved out in three columns. The right column, under the command of Major-General Maxwell, C.B., consisting of the Bays, E battery 1st Brigade R.A., the 2nd Battalion 4th, 27th, 30th, 46th, and 102nd, marched by the North Camp station and Frimley Green, along the Bagshot road to the camping ground. The centre column, commanded by Major-General Park, C.B., consisting of the Carbineers, E Battery 14th Brigade R.A., 2nd Battalion 15th, 50th, 90th and 99th, and conveying the control and head-quarters baggage, marched through the North Camp, along the Farnborough-road by Frimley and Yorktown. The left column, commanded by Major-General Smith, C.B., and consisting of the 7th Hussars, E Battery 14th Brigade R.A., 2nd Battalion 17th, 2nd Battalion 22nd, and 100th Regiment marched across Cove Common through Hawley and Blackwater and along the Wishmoor-road. The march of all three columns was covered by the 13th Hussars, which regiment on reaching the open ground above Wishmoor bottom, in which the force camped for the day on either side of the stream, extended itself facing the north and covered the spot allocated for the camp. Each infantry regiment had belonging to it, driven by its own men who have been instructed in riding and driving, six general service and one supply waggon each drawn by four horses, one ammunition-cart, one water-cart and one entrenching tool-cart each drawn by two horses. Each cavalry regiment has six general service waggons horsed by four horse teams, one forge-cart and one water-cart. To each regiment a non-commissioned officer of the transport department is detailed to see to the speedy and proper loading of the waggons, and to each brigade there is a transport officer in charge of horses. This system promises to be a great success. Rations are in future to be drawn over night, and they come on with the column in the supply-waggons. The food by this arrangement is not spoiled by being carried on a hot dusty line of march in haversacks or mess-tins. By the time the tents are up, kitchens dug, fires alight, and so forth, the rations are issued and ready for cooking. On the arrival of the infantry, Major-General Park's brigade, leaving the Carbineer's in Camp, moved out and took up an advanced front as out-posts, extending over a semi-circle of some four miles. His arrangements were pronounced to be very good. About three o'clock, the men in camp having dined and rested, an imaginary enemy attacked in force and immediately the tents fell to bugle-sound, the baggage being packed away and the baggage columns in order of march within half an hour. In the meantime the main force being assembled moved out of the hollow to top of the ridge on the open ground to check the advance of the foe while the baggage was being packed and sent to the rear. Instead of getting up his reserves to strengthen his front which occupied a wooded and broken position well suited for obstinate resistance at little cost, Park speedily withdrew his reserve across the Wishmoor-bottom, and uncovered by skirmishers, took up a new position behind it to cover the main body. Pressed by the enemy, he was rein forced by several regiments from the main body, and the whole deployed upon the naked ridge, and halting opened a heavy fire from the most exposed situation it was possible to select, one which in real war would have been swept by shot and shell and rifle-bullet. If these are our tactics, then the foreign visitors need not come to us to learn the art of war. Whilst we are closely studying the mobility and organization of a marching army, we are forgotting how to fight it.

The Bargomaster and Town Council of Ghent have through the Foreign Office invited British Volunteers to a grand Tir-International to be held in September. The Anglo-Belgian Prize Fund Committee has issued a very wholesome set of regulations to be observed by volunteers accepting this invitation. The men when in Belgium will be required to parade in full uniform, at such times and places as may be appointed by the Brigadier appointed to command them, and they will be required to observe a soldierly bearing. Slovenliness of attire, or a mixture of regimental and civilian clothing, will be strictly prohibited: officers alone will be permitted to wear undress uniform, and the practice of interchanging clothing or accoutrements between Belgian and English Volunteers will not be permitted. The Council has the option of accepting or rejecting applications, so the worthies who misbehaved themselves on former occasions will have now to stay at home, especially so as each application has to be accompanied by a good conduct certificate from the adjutant of the man's corps or from the officer of his company.

Even at this late period of the session the debate on Tuesday was by no means a waste of time, for it extracted from Mr. Goschen a pledge that the Admiralty is prepared, by supplying gun-boats and instructions to do all in its power to foster the creation of a Naval Volunteer Force. Mr. Graves spoke in warm language of the readiness of our seafaring folk to volunteer, and the First Lord met him more than half-way. "We have now a triple line of interior defence, "says the Daily News," in the army, the militia, and the volunteers; we have two lines of coast defence in the navy and in the reserve which is the militia of the seas. A volunteer naval force, enrolled for coast defence, will make the external line of defence three-fold." And this is the way to put it. Mr. Graves suggested that if the Duke of Edinburgh were put at the head of the naval reserves and volunteers, there would be an end of panics of invasion. This suggestion has been anticipated by the President of the Board of Trade, as is now under discussion between his department and the Admiralty. With the prospect of our Sailor Prince for commandant, great impetus would be given to the growth and efficiency of our naval volunteers, who might in numbers and efficiency at least equal their military brethren. The fishermen and coast population will come forward almost to a man, but ship-owners should give up their short-sighted policy of refusing to engage men and boys who are connected with the Reserve.

A Military Railway Corps is advocated, having for its object the management and working of railways in the time of war. The tactical value of a railway can hardly be over-rated. Railways won the battle of Montebello for the French, when Stadion had carried Casteggio and Montebello, and had beaten them, for they enabled them to bring up heavy reinforcements from Voghera, which landed their living freights on the field of battle, and turned by dint of superior numbers the fortunes of the day against the Austrians. In June 1866, at two days' notice, the Prussians between the 13th and 16th concentrated at Brieg, by means of rail, 85 trains containing 1,154 officers, 35,523 men, 9,334 horses, 115 two-wheeled carriages including guns, and 824 four-wheeled waggons, and most of these came from Berlin and Potsdam. An Austrian authority, Major Costa de Serda, assigns half an hour as the time requisite for the embarkation of a battalion, three-quarters of an hour for a squadron, and one hour and a half for a battery, supposing that all is duly prepared beforehand. A special railway corps is much needed, and is likely to be composed by railway artificers, guards, goods porters, &c., under the orders of their own officers, the whole being instructed by officers from the Royal Engineers who are to have a special training. Its basis will be essentially military.

Preparations are now in progress at Shoeburyness for the formation of the camp, in which next week about 1,100 Volunteer Artillerymen from all parts of the kingdom will be quartered during the great gun contests at land and sea ranges offered by the National Artillery Association. The camp, which is to be occupied from Monday next, will be under the command of Colonel Chermside, R.A.

The report of the Adjutant-General upon the organization of the Royalf Artillery has just been published. It is the result of an inquiry into the working of the present system of brigades, and contains the evidence upon that point given by officers of all ranks. The General, if not unanimous opinion seems to be that, in spite of the various anomalies in point of detail, it is undesirable to abandon the present system. But Sir Richard Airy himself considers that difficulties have been experienced in administering it by reason of the unequal number of batteries in brigades, owing to the frequent changes in the number of batteries required for India, and from the circumstance of many brigades in that country being mixed or composed of field and garrison batteries. Any difficulties, however, on this score might easily be remedied without any radical change. The whole force consists of 229 batteries amounting to 33,562 men and 13,177 horses. It is proposed to divide these into six brigades of Horse Artillery of five batteries each, twelve brigades of field and thirteen of garrison artillery, of seven batteries each, with the senior Lieutenant-Colonel in command at head-quarters. It has throughout been admitted that there should be some division beyond the battery, which is the tactical unit. Both the Commander-in-Chief and the Adjutant-General are strongly opposed to the appointment of a General Officer of Artillery, as likely to interfere with the present policy of assimilating the artillery to the rest of the army on all points of administration and discipline.

A HINT TO WINE DRINKERS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "BOMBAY GAZETTE."

SIR,—As you have lately published the result of an analysis made of a few particular descriptions of claret offered for sale in the Bombay market by some traders, I think the subjoined views of an American writer—the name of whom has unfortunately been defaced from the frontispiece of the book from which it is extracted—will not be uninteresting to your readers.

While discussing on the subjects of History, Geography, and Statistics, he states that a great proportion of the wine which is drunk under the denomination of "fine claret" is nothing but the vin ordinaire, or, at best, the secondary growths of Gascony and Guienne; for the prime growths fall far short of the demand which prevails for these wines, not only in America, but in England, Holland, the north of Europe, and the East and West Indies. In favourable years, the produce of Lafitte, Latour, and Château Margaux, sells at from 3,000 to 3,200 francs the tun, which contains 242 gallons; and when they have been kept in the vaults for six years, the price is doubled; so that even in Bordeaux a bottle of the best wine cannot be purchased for less than six francs (the reader will please bear in mind that this was written in MDCCCLVII.) There is, however, a particular manufacture, called travial a l'Anglaise, which consists in adding to each hogshead of Bordeaux wine three or four gallons of Alicant of Bimcarlo, half a gallon of stum wine, and sometimes a small quantity of Hermitage. This mixture undergoes a slight degree of fermentation; and, when the whole is sufficiently fretted in, it is exported under the name of claret.

Now, I must add something about that barbarous system which some unthinking persons practise of decanting claret or pouring it into glass jugs. By this means, which is little short of sacrilege, the delicate and fragrant bouquet is destroyed. Never be guilty of such injustice to this truly delicious wine; there is never any crust or deposit in good claret, and you may safely pass the bottle, but with this special observance, never take the cork out but to replenish your glass.

I now anxiously await to read what you have to say regarding brandy of the best and worst qualities as submitted for sale here, when I hope to appear again in your columns. In the meantime I remain, &c.,

BACCHUS.

WE understand that Hurriba Dada, who till recently performed the duties of confidential messenger between His Highness the Gaekwar and the Resident, Colonel Shortt, at Baroda, has been displaced by Nanasaheb Khanvilkur, His Highness's brother-in-law.

THE S.S. ATALANTA.—In the notice which appeared in yesterday's paper about the meeting of underwriters, the resolution, by a printer's mistake, was made to refer to another gentleman than Captain Matthews. It is almost unnecessary to say that it was him whom the underwriters decided to honour.

MORTUARY RETURNS.—The total number of deaths registered during the week ending Tuesday, the 20th August, was 406, being 41 more than in the preceding week, 101 more than the total of the week ending 22nd August 1871, and 108 more than the mean of the corresponding period in the previous five years. During the week 228 births were reported in the different districts of the city.

CREDITABLE POONA POLICE.—We understand that warrants have been issued for the apprehension of Khanshiab, the chief constable, and Luximon Jemedar, who made themselves scarce from Poona some time ago, and against whom charges of bribery have been preferred before Mr. C. W. Bell, the First Assistant Collector. It will doubtless be a very hard work for the police to capture him, as Khanshiab was himself said to be a very able detective.—Poona Observer.

THE ADMINISTRATION OF DHATURA IN NATIVE SWEETMEAT.—At the Girgaum Police Court yesterday, before Mr. Woodward, Acting Second Magistrate, Sathia Nursoo was charged with administering a poisonous substance to Rajoo, woman, and Mahadoo Wittoo on the 22nd July last, with intent to commit or facilitate the commission of the offence of theft; and Mahadoo Gunoo with abetting the aforesaid offence. We have already published the particulars of the case. Several witnesses were examined, and the magistrate then adjourned the case for further enquiry till to-morrow.

THE DELAY OF THE MAIL STEAMER DELTA.—The Englishman says—"From a private letter from Bombay, we gather that the probable cause of the detention of the last English mail-steamer was bad weather off the coast. On the night of the 14th there was very heavy rain and wind, and it is probable that the steamer went out again, fearing a lee-shore in such weather." Of course this is mere speculation on our contemporary's part. The real reason of the delay was that a trifling accident happened to the machinery, which necessitated a stoppage of several hours, and the delay may have been aggravated by the Delta's being one of the old-fashioned paddle-boats, which in a monsoon sea are scarcely so efficacious as screws.

AN ACTION FOR MUNICIPAL RATES AND TAXES.—At the Small Causes Court yesterday, before J. O'Leary, Esq., First Judge, a case was called for hearing in which the Acting Municipal Commissioner, for and on behalf of the Justices, was the plaintiff; and Mr. Manockjee Pestonjee Tuback was defendant. The suit was brought to recover Rs. 510-9-1, amount due from the defendant to the Justices of the Peace for the City of Bombay, in respect of arrears of Municipal rates and taxes for the years 1868-1869-1870 and 1871. Mr. Crawford (of Leathes and Crawford) appeared for the plaintiff; Mr. Pestonjee Dinshaw for the defendant. The receipt of Rs. 50 was admitted, and the Court gave a verdict for the plaintiff for the balance, namely, Rs. 460-9-1, of which sum Rs. 50 were ordered to be paid in a week, and the remainder by instalments of Rs. 25 a month.

CONTEMPT OF COURT.—At the High Court yesterday, before the HON. Mr. Justice Bayley, an application was made in the suit of Narayen Suntojee v. Chinnajee Shewram and others for a rule nisi for a writ of attachment for contempt of Court. Mr. Macpherson, instructed by Messrs. Hearn, Cleveland, and Peile, on behalf of the plaintiff, moved for a rule nisi calling upon the defendants to show cause why they should not be committed for contempt for disobedience of an order made by Mr. Justice Green in chambers on the 29th July last, directing the defendants forthwith to pay to Sokur Bapoojee, the receiver appointed in the suit, the rents of the premises in the plaint mentioned recovered by the defendants, or any of them, since the 3rd July 1871. It appeared, said the learned counsel, that these men had been systematically receiving the rents in disobedience of the order. His Lordship granted the application.

Hutcheson, sailed yesterday for the Malabar Coast and Calcutta with a cargo of 100 bales cotton for Hongkong, a general cargo for different ports, and the following passengers:—For Cochin or Narakal—Rev. THE SUEZ CANAL DUES.—The Liverpool Chamber of Commerce have resolved to call the attention of the Foreign-office and the Board of Trade to the points in dispute between the Suez Canal Company and the mercantile community, and to urge the necessity of arriving at a general agreement as to what constitutes a "ton of capacity" within the meaning of the Suez Canal Company's Charters.—Shipping Gazette.

THE COROMANDEL, an old Indian Navy steamer, which was sold two years ago to Messrs. W. Nicol & Co., agents for the British India Steam Navigation Company, for Rs. 33,000, and has until lately been used by them as a coal hulk in the Persian Gulf, and which was towed into our harbour some time ago to effect necessary repairs, has since been sold to breakers for Rs. 41,000. The great advance in the price of iron has enabled the sellers to obtain such good price. The Coromandel has been put ashore near the P. & O. dock at Mazagon; and labourers have already commenced to break her up.

THE STEAM SHIPPING TRADE.—In the steam shipping trade there would seem to be a general feeling that the upward tendency of prices, which has continued with unvarying flow for the last eighteen months or two years, has reached its extreme limit, and that, for a time at least, we must look for a somewhat slackened demand and lower prices, both for new and second-hand steamers. In the Freight Market, although there is no lack of employment, the rates of freight have ruled very moderate. The corn market, which at this time of the year so greatly influences shipping affairs, has been inanimate, and business from the Russian and Danubian grain ports has been on a most moderate scale. It is anticipated, however, that large supplies of grain must come from the States and British North America, and that remunerative rates of freight from that quarter will prevail to the end of the season. Notwithstanding the serious increase in the charges for passage through the Suez Canal, there are a large number of steamers preparing to load for the East. It is hoped, however, that better outward rates of freight will be maintained.—Alfred Brett and Co.'s Circular, Aug. 1.

A LOBSTER never comes ashore without great risk of getting into hot water.

THE man who popped the question by starlight got his answer in a twinking.

WHEN may a ship be said to be in love?—When she is in want of a mate, or she's attached to a buoy.

A SAILOR, whose sweetheart had a very handsome set of teeth, attempted to kiss her; but she eluded him, and gave him a box on the ear. "Just my luck," said the good-natured sailor; "I'm always getting wrecked on the coral reefs."

SHERIDAN'S solicitor calling one day, found the wit's wife alone, and walking about in a state of violent excitement. He asked what was the matter. Her only reply was that "her husband was a villain." After a time she added, with some hesitation, "Why, I have discovered that all the loveletters he sent me were the very same as he sent to his first wife."

DR. LIVINGSTONE.

(Times, July 27.)

THE following appeared in the New York Herald of July 26:—

"Ujiji-on-Tanganyika, Nov. 1871.

"My dear Sir,—It is, in general, somewhat difficult to write to one we have never seen. It feels so much like addressing an abstract idea; but the presence of your representative, Mr. H. M. Stanley, in this distant region takes, away the strangeness I should otherwise have felt, and in writing to thank you for the extreme kindness that prompted you to send him I feel quite at home.

"If I explain the foriorn condition in which he found me you will easily perceive that I have good reason to use very strong expressions of gratitude. I came to Ujiji off a tramp of between 400 and 500 miles beneath a blazing vertical sun having been baffled, worried, defeated, and forced to return by mine, by a number of half-caste Moslem slaves, sent to me from Zanzibar, instead of men. The sore heart made to me from Zanzibar, instead of men. The sore heart made still sorer by the truly woeful sights I had seen of 'man's inhumanity to man' reacted on the bodily frame and depressed it beyond measure. I thought that I was dying on my feet. It is not too much to say that almost every step of the weary sultry way I was in pain, and I reached Ujiji a mere rackle of bones. Here I found that some £500 worth of goods I had ordered from Zanzibar had unaccountably been intrusted to a drunken half-caste Moslem tailor, who, after squandering them for 16 months in the way to Ujiji, finished up by selling off all that remained for slaves and ivory for himself. He had divined on the Koran, and found that I was dead. He had also written to the Governor of Unyanyembe that he had sent slaves after me to Manyema, who returned and reported my decease, and begged permission to sell off the few goods that his drunken appetite had spared. He, however, knew perfectly well from men who had seen me that I was alive and waiting for the goods and men; but as for morality, he is evidently an idiot; and, there being no law here except that of the dagger or musket, I had to sit down in great weakness, destitue of everything save a few barter cloths and beads I had taken the precaution to leave here in case of extreme need. The near prospect of beggary among Ujijians made me miserable, I could not despair, because I laughed so much at a friend who, on reaching the mouth of the Zambezi, said 'that he was tempted to despair on breaking the photograph of his wife; we could have no success after that.' After that the idea of despair has to me such a strong smack of the ludicrous, it is out of the question.

"Well, when I had got to about the lowest verge, vague rumours of an English visitor reached me. I thought of myself as the man who went down from Jerusalem to Jericho; but neither priest, Levite, nor Samaritan could possibly pass my way. Yet the good Samaritan was close at hand, and one of my people rushed up at the top of his speed, and in great excitement gasped out, 'An English man coming! I see him,' and off he darted to meet him. An American flag, the first ever seen in these parts, at the head of a caravan, told me the nationality of the stranger. I am as cold and non-demonstrative as we islanders are usually reputed to be, but your kindness made my frame thrill. It was indeed overwhelming, and I said in my soul, 'Let the richest blessings descend from the Highest on you and yours.' The news Mr. Stanley had to tell me was thrilling; the mighty political changes on the Continent the success of the Atlantic cables, the election of General Grant, and many topics rivetted my attention for days together, and had an immediate and beneficial effect on my health. I had been without news from home for years, save what I could glean from a few Saturday Reviews and copies of Punch for 1868. The appetite revived, and in a week I began to feel strong again. Mr. Stanley brought a most kind and encouraging despatch from Lord Clarendon, whose love I sincerely deplore—the first I have received from the Foreign Office since 1866—and information that Her Majesty's Government had kindly sent £1,000 to my aid. Up to his arrival I was not aware of any pecuniary aid. I am unashamed, but this want is now happily repaired, and I am anxious that you and all my friends should know that, though uncheered by letters, I have stuck to the task which my friend Sir Roderick Murchison set me with John Bullish tenacity, believing that all will come right at last.

"The watershed of South Central Africa is over 700 miles in length. The fountains thereon are almost innumerable—that is, it would take a man's lifetime to count them. From the watershed they converge into four large rivers, and these again into two mighty streams in the great Nile valley, which begins 10 deg.—12 deg. south latitude. It was long ere light dawned on the ancient problem and gave me a clear idea of the drainage. I had to feel my way, and every step of the way, and was generally groping in the dark; for who cared where the rivers ran? 'We drink our fill, and let the rest run by.' The Portuguese who visited Cazembe asked for slaves, ivory, and heard of nothing else. I asked about the waters, questioned and cross-questioned until almost afraid of being set down as afflicted with hydrocephalus.

"My last work, in which I have been greatly hindered from want of suitable attendants, was following the central line of drainage down through the country of the cannibals, called Manyuema, or latterly Manyema. This line of drainage has four large lakes in it. The fourth I was near when obliged to turn. It is from one to three miles broad, and never can be waded at any point or at any time of the year. There are two western drains. The Lufira, or Bartle Frere's River, flows into it at Lake Kamolondo. Then the great river Lomami flows through Lake Lincoln into it too, and seems to form the western arm of the Nile on which Petherick traded.

"Now, I know about 600 miles of the watershed, and unfortunately, the seventh hundred is the most interesting of the whole, for in it, if I am not mistaken, four fountains arise from an earthen mound, and each of the four becomes at no great distance off, a large river. Two of these run north to Egypt. Lufira and Lomami, and two run south into inner Ethiopia as the Liambai, or Upper Zambezi, and the Kafue. Are these not the sources of the Nile mentioned by the secretary of Minerva, in the city of Sais, to Herodotus? I have heard of them so often, and at great distances off, that I cannot doubt their existence, and in spite of the sore longing for home which seizes me every time I think of my family, I wish to finish up by their rediscovery.

"Five hundred pounds' worth of goods have again unaccountably been intrusted to slaves, and I have been over a year on the way, instead of four months. I must go to where the lie (Unyanyembe), at Mr. Stanley's and your expence, ere I can put the natural completion to my work; and if my disclosures regarding the terrible Ujijian slaving should lead to the suppression of the East Coast slave trade, I shall regard that as a greater matter by far than the discovery of all the Nile sources together. Now that you have done with domestic slavery for ever, lend us your powerful aid towards this great object. This fine country is blighted as with a curse from above, in order that the slaving privileges of the petty Sultan of Zanzibar may not be infringed, and that the rights of the Crown of Portugal, which are mythical, should be kept in abeyance till some future time, when Africa will become another India to Portuguese slave dealers.

"I conclude by again thanking you most cordially for your great generosity" and am gratefully yours,

"DAVID LIVINGSTONE.

"Mr. James Gordon Bennett, Jun."

(New York Herald, July 27.)

THE Rev. Horace Waller sends to the Times the following extracts from a long letter written to him by Dr. Livingstone:—

"Ujiji, November, 1871.

"My dear Waller,—I received two letters from you in February last, and answered them; but in September I found them in the spot they were left. The post office authorities in Manyuema had neglected to furnish the postman with velocipedes, and as I never saw these machines I could not urge their adoption, and brought the answers to Ujiji myself. They are out of date now, and I only refer to them to show you that I did not follow the plan which you and so many others adopted, of sitting speculating on where I should come out, instead of writing like Christians to cheer and help me while I was in. If I had ever been known to swerve from a task I took in hand you would be excusable."

Speaking of the Nile, he says:—

"The watershed is at least 700 miles long, and I crossed and re-crossed it, went backwards and forwards and side ways in a route I shall never attempt to depict, feeling my way, and every step of the way, and was generally groping in the dark, for nobody cared where the rivers ran; the most intelligent traders thought that they all ran into Tanganyika, some that they went to the West Coast, or elsewhere. When at last light dawned on the ancient problem, I stuck to my task like a Briton. I did not go down Tanganyika, because the Ujijians were eager to rob me as they did Speke and Burton, and I had but a few goods left of the stock which was plundered in coming to depot. I therefore preferred to expend them on the central line of drainage Webb's Lualabs, and a tough job it was. By some strange hallucination, our friend Kirk placed some £500 of goods in the hands of a drunken half caste tailor as leader, who, after trading with soap, opium, brandy, and gunpowder for 16 months, refused to go beyond Ujiji, and there sold off all for slaves and ivory for himself, and I returned to find myself destitue."

Writing from Unyanyembe, February 17, 1872, he says:—

"All your past misdemeanours, faults, failings, and nonsense of every degree, are hereby condoned and obliterated I feel inclined to proclaim an amnesty to all the world. I got the boots you most kindly sent, with the stockings and flannel shirts, and ever received a more welcome present. I had been reduced to French boots and shoes, patent leather abominations much too small for my Herculean feet. I cut and slashed to ease my feet till they would not stick on and marvelled at the pain those must feel who try by pinching to make their feet small. . . To avoid being fleeced by certain tribes near Ujiji, Mr. Stanley and I went up Tanganyika or south, then struck through a beautiful mountainous country for ten days without a path going east; then reached part of my friend's previous route when he had correctly put down, and so by his guidance moved on to Unyanyembe. Making it a march of 54 days, and much of it without patch, and raining almost every day as if it would never tire, we came here yesterday, February 18, 1872."

Speaking of Mr. Young, who cleared up the story of his murder, he says—

"I have just seen Young's book; he did his work right nobly and well, and I feel grateful to him, as I mention in a despatch of thanks to the Foreign, Office. . . . . The Manyuema slave trade is as bad as the Portuguese, but the country is lavish of food, and fewer die of starvation. Here the Banian British subjects are the great slavers by their money. The wretches dare not kill a goat or a fish, yet it is no overdrawn statement to say that by their money and means they are the worst cannibals in all Africa. Kirk did not know this, or he would not have employed the chief slaves, trader Luddha (since dead) to aid me by sending slaves, who all believe firmly that they are not to follow, but force me back. I shall not spare the villains who have caused me the loss of two years in time, over 1,800 miles of tramp, and I do not know how much money; but all will come right at last.

"DAVID LIVINGSTONE."

A BLOT HIT.

Yes; 'neath over-legislation,
Vernon Harcourt, groans this nation.
Statutes, to compel behaving
Prettily, are men enslaving.
Freedom is—defend its cause!—
No unnecessary laws.

A CLOWN ON CHIGNONS.

I takes care my hay to dry
Well afore my rick I raises;
'Cause, if damp, 'tool heat by-'m-by,
Ees, and bust out into blazes.

So, you gals, that stacks your hair
Far above, in men's opinions,
All you could by natur' wear,
Mind you always airs your chignons.

For, like hay-ricks sometimes fires
Of theirselves, put moist together,
So them hair-ricks we admires
Also med, this here hot weather.

Though the heads o' them we love,
Flarun' up outright be-n't many,
How they hair-ricks must, above,
Bake the brains below—if any!

TALK AGAINST TIME.

Great cry you say, and little wool;
In Parliament you find.
Indeed, that's true enough, John Bull,
But therefore never mind.

The tongues that time consume in prate
Afford not any cause
For grief to those who fear, and hate,
Unnecessary laws.

By Session after Session closed
Each twelvemonths, on our backs,
Some new restraint has been imposed,
Or some vexatious tax.

O let the flood of words not cease!
For, whilst that deluge pours,
Our legislators can't increase
Our burdens and our bores.

Our liberties, until they've spent
Their talk, they can't repress;
Our imposts they can not augment,
Nor make our pleasures less.

CHIT-CHAT.

Miss Amy Pinchdol, a young pianiste, aged seven, has just achieved the stupendous task of playing the first eight bars of "In my Cottage," with one hand, nine times consecutively, in the course of two hours. Should there be a public competition, she will probably obtain the first prize.

Mr. Smuggins, of Boon's Buildings, Bethnal, whose decease was reported some weeks ago, is alive.

Master Johnny Smith, aged eleven on the 10th of May last, will attain his twelft year (D. V.) on the occasion of his next birthday.

Mr. Prigg, member of various West End Clubs, will shortly exhibit his valuable Loan Collection of Umbrellas.

Two flies were caught and killed the other day in the neighbourhood of Regent's Park.

Mr. Doo Walker found London too hot for him last week. His bills were £12,000 at the hottest part of the day. He is now in the shade.

Herr Hermann, the distinguished German, took off his hat the other day no less than a hundred and fifty times between seven a. m. and ten p. m. He finally took himself off. He is now in England for the benefit of his hat.

The Grand National Swimming Match will, it is hoped, take place this year in the Thames above Henley. The sole condition is, that the competitors must never have been in the water on any occasion previous to the day of the match. The prize is to be a good wholesome cake—of Brown Windsor.

Baron Rothschild purchased sixpen'orth of strawberries for fivepence ready money. It is supposed that he could not spare more on account of the New South Austrian Loan.

A new system of ventilation has been invented for the use of some of our theatres. Two or three stupid plays, and nothing attractive in artistes, and the house will be quite empty and charmingly cool.

Mr. Robinson had excellent sport off Twickenham bank on Wednesday last. He hooked as many as twenty worms in the course of the day. Shoals of sticklebacks and gudgeon were seen in the neighbourhood of his punt. At 8 p. m. he caught a train and hooked it by the South-Western line.

1267 jokes about "bores, big bores, and small bores," were made during the Wimbledon meeting. The total shows a decrease of three jokes on the word "bore" since 1868.

No new subject of ball-practice-conversation has been introduced during the present season.

A NATIONAL WARNING.

Liquor Lawson, look here; this is from Allen's Indian Mail:—

"Beef and Beer in India.—Babo o Rajendralee Mittra surprised his audience at the last meeting of the Asiatic Society of Bengal by his paper on the use of beef in ancient India. Imagine the horror of the more orthodox among them at being told by one of their most learned sages that, according to old Sanskrit writings, the Hindus were a beer-drinking and beef-eating race. . . . The Baboo held that Brahmins ate beef until the first century B.C., when they began to follow the example of their Buddhist rivals. No authority older than the seventh century after Christ can be quoted, it seems, against the use of beef."

The livers of animals slaughtered for sacrifice, the Baboo informed his hearers, "were roasted and reserved for the delectation of the priests, who then washed down with draughts of 'soma beer.'"

Now, Liquor Lawson, see what the Hindoos have come to in little more than a thousand years' time by disusing beef and beer. The analogies of language, you know, prove ourselves to be a branch of the Indo-European family, come of the same original stock as the Hindoos. Look at the difference between us and our rice-eating, water-drinking, poor relations, the Brahmins. If you had your way, British and Anglo-Saxon posterity would in a few generations be reduced to a level with those herring sided, enfeebled Lascars and Coolies. They are black, most of them; and if we also were to adopt vegetarian and teetotal habits, as their forefathers, apostate from good living, did, our own race, doubtless, in time would turn black too. Will you say that you want to enforce Teetotalism only, and not Vegetarianism also? Well, but if you succeed in shutting up public houses, somebody else, equally reasonable with yourself, will, with equal reason, demand the suppression of butchers' shops, and the nation of milksops that will have submitted itself to restriction at your bidding will be likely enough to let that other place them under further restraint. A pretty progeny, then, John Bull will have some centuries hence—precious descendants of once beef-eating and beer-drinking Britons! Go to, then, Liquor Lawson, unless you will come round and liquor up; liquor, and let others liquor, especially in this hot weather.

Holloway's Ointment and Pills.— Health's Defences.— None save the strongest can with impunity pass through the sudden transitions from wet to dry, from cold to muggy weather so prevalent during the late autumn and early winter months. Influenza, bronchitis, cough, sore throat, diphtheria, or quinsey will attack those most watchful of their health; but they can readily arrest any of these complaints by rubbing Holloway's Ointment twice a day upon the skin adjacent to the affected part, and by assisting its corrective action with appropriate does of his Pills. This well-known, safe, and easy mode of treatment efficiently protects the invalid both from present and future danger without weakening or even depressing the system in the slightest degree.
